Box and whisker plots pose many problems for students. They often confuse the length of a quartile for the size of data it includes. After seeing my students struggle with this concept for years (even more-so because they had to analyze the data, not merely create the plot) I came up with this acti

In R is there any way to produce plots which have no title and which use the space the title would otherwise have taken up?. In plot(), main, sub, xlab, and ylab all default to NULL, but this just leaves blank space where they would have been, ditto for setting them to ".It would be nice if not including them meant that the entire plot space was utilized rather than leaving extra empty space ...

I have a little doubt if any of the answers here actually answer the question. To me it looks like the question asks how to get rid of the offset. Yet all the answers show various ways how to get rid of all the ticklabels. If the question has been superseded by the answers, maybe one should edit the question to ask for what the answers provide solutions for?

Brabantio comes to the window and Iago tells him to dress at once and come down, for "an old black ram/Is tugging your white ewe" (I.i.88). Unable to understand Iago's reference to the union of Othello and Desdemona, Brabantio demands to know why they are bothering him at such a late hour.

Shakespeare's Othello: Plot Summary

Commercial apple orchards can easily produce 1,000 bushels per acre of fruit; that's 42,000 pounds of potential deer feed on 1 acre of ground — nearly six times as much tonnage per acre as corn. Fruit plot growers will most likely never achieve these types of yields, but a goal of 2-4 bushels per tree or around 400 bushels per acre is highly realistic.
